Stirling Campus

Content

The city of Stirling has received funding for a high-tech film studio, which will benefit the university's students. The new facilities are expected to attract major TV and movie production companies, as well as providing career opportunities for those keen to join or further their positions in the film and media industry.

On this course you will:

Learn from experts about film history and theory; Get hands-on with audio production and video editing; Experience documentary filmmaking and screenwriting; Explore podcasting and digital media.

You'll use real industry equipment and:

work in the state-of-the-art newsroom; create shows for the campus TV and radio stations; join the filmmaking and videography society.
