Content

Engage with world-changing issues in Religion, past and present, in this uniquely critical and interdisciplinary programme. Combine your degree with a wide range of other courses to prepare for your future.

Studying Religion at the University of Stirling gives you a chance to examine all these relevant issues from many different angles. You'll explore how the meaning of "Religion" differs around the world, and take a positively interdisciplinary approach to considering how the term might be re-interpreted. The university's teaching team is dedicated to carrying out cutting-edge research into what they call critical religion, and they feed their findings not only into new books and papers, but also back into your coursework.

Through your studies, you'll develop a critically discerning mind, and by extension, an invaluable understanding of other people's point-of-view and approach to the world, by which you can help to change thinking, policy and practice both locally and globally.
