Content

Inspire the next generation of learners by becoming a qualified primary school teacher. This Primary Education course is highly rated, practical and accredited by the General Teaching Council for Scotland. When you graduate, you'll be ready to register as a primary teacher. A rewarding career in education awaits you.

A Primary Education degree from the University of Stirling prepares you to teach across the whole primary age range. Our course also enables you to specialise in an aspect of primary education that interests you most.

As you study your primary teaching degree at Stirling, you'll gain the vital experience you need in the classroom.

The course includes four placements, giving you the opportunity to put all your learning into practice. You'll be supported each step of the way and complete your course with first-hand knowledge of how to turn theory into practice in a school environment.

Placements are supervised by qualified teachers and supported by university tutors, helping you develop professional confidence and classroom skills year by year.
