Arts and Humanities

Open University in Scotland

Content

This diploma of higher education gives you the freedom to combine the study of different subject areas in the arts and humanities. The course offers a deep understanding of the world we live in today, drawing on the perspectives of art history, classical studies, creative writing, English literature, history, music, philosophy and religious studies. You can combine this with other options, including languages, psychology, or the social sciences. As you progress, your cultural literacy and understanding of the past will be developed. You'll sharpen your critical awareness and refine the skills of debate and analysis that are valued by employers.
