Law and Management

Robert Gordon University

Content

The Law and Management course from Robert Gordon University equips you with a sound understanding of law as well as key business management skills and knowledge. The high level of flexibility within the course, particularly at Honours level, allows you to shape your degree to specialise in the areas you develop an interest in.

As well as studying core law subjects, you will also study management perspectives and principles, gain an understanding of economic concepts and learn effective people management skills. Practical experience is developed through oral presentations, group work, research, and legal debating also known as mooting.

You will also have the opportunity to take part in internal, national and international mooting competitions across the world and benefit from our on-campus Moot Court.
