Content

Geography explores the intersection of many changes – social, economic, political, environmental and technological – and the varied implications for different people and places. Our courses bring together key perspectives on location, scale, process and spatial variation with skills in research design, analysis, and effective reading and communication.

Our degrees tackle questions of relevance globally and locally. This means they are perfect whether you are in Scotland, the UK or the rest of the world.

Our course is highly flexible. Depending on your interests and the combinations of subjects you want to take, you can study geography for an MA or for a BSc. You can do Geography as a Single Honours degree, as a Joint Honours degree, or with a European language. You can also specialise in Human Geography or Physical Geography or combine from both areas.
