

Business with Human Resource Management

Robert Gordon University

Content

This degree explores the theoretical and practical aspects of HR. You will learn the key disciplines of human resource management through a unique blend of modules including Operations Management and Human Resource Development.

The course is part of the flexible business and management programme, which offers you a number of benefits and opportunities including working on bespoke projects with a real industry partner. Within the penultimate years of the course, you will be able to tailor your study to your own interests and career aspirations and have the opportunity to participate in short term management and enterprise projects.
