Content

This is a vocational and skills-specific course suitable if you want to pursue a career in Journalism.

Journalism nowadays demands a skill set not limited to writing and research alone. Journalists are expected to be proficient in recording high-quality sound, shooting videos, and editing on digital systems. The growing need for journalists to produce web content has increased demand for digital skills. As a response to these requirements, this course has been developed to ensure that students are well-versed and practiced in the digital skills that are the future of journalism. The course is designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the tools and techniques essential for success in a rapidly evolving media landscape.

This course will provide the skills to prepare for the professional world or advance to university. Additionally, you will have the chance to specialise in a particular area of journalism that you find intriguing.
