

Marine and Coastal Tourism

West Highland College UHI

Venues

Fort William Campus
Virtual Learning Environment (VLE)

Content

This unique course, the first of its kind in the UK, focuses on the many uses of the marine resource and how tourism interacts with these. You will consider many aspects including activities, climate and environment, community, customers and policy from both a UK and international perspective. The degree integrates theory and practice to develop the skills and academic knowledge you will need as a tourism professional working in the marine and coastal sector.

This integrated, practical programme gives you the opportunity to gain experience and National Governing Body awards in activities including sailing, sea kayaking and SCUBA diving. This is supplemented by a programme of guest speakers, visits to shows and conferences, student expeditions and field courses. You will be ideally placed to get involved in a number of very real local development projects, working alongside and learning from the professionals.
