

Nursing (Children and Young People)

Open University in Scotland

Content

Children and Young People is one of several specialist routes available in the BSc (Honours) Nursing.

This unique practice-based qualification is ideal if you're aspiring to become a registered nurse, whether you're already working in a healthcare role or new to the sector. If employed in healthcare, you can stay in work while you study, provided your employer supports this and suitable practice is arranged. For those new to the sector and living in England, we offer an alternative route to study this degree in partnership with Oxford University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust. Successful completion makes you eligible to apply for registration as a qualified nurse (Children and Young People) with the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC).
