Arts and Humanities

Open University in Scotland

Content

This degree gives you the freedom to combine studying different subject areas in the arts and humanities. You can develop specialisms and build up a broad portfolio of interests. The course offers a deep understanding of the world we live in today, drawing on the perspectives of art history, classical studies, creative writing, English language, English literature, history, modern languages, music, philosophy, and religious studies. You'll discover how knowledge is created and shared in the arts and humanities, stretch your imagination and develop your own creative and critical responses. You'll also become an independent learner and a member of a diverse and vibrant student community.
