Criminology and Policing

Abertay University

Content

Studying topics like policing in practice, cybercrime, and drugs and addiction, you'll discover just how well these subjects complement each other. You'll hear from academic experts and guest lecturers with real world experience, giving you opportunities to network and learn at the same time. You'll graduate with a thorough understanding of criminology and the real issues behind modern police work.

If you're keen to work for the police, you'll have the option to apply to be a special constable. This hands-on work experience puts you in a great position to join them if that's your plan after graduating.

This is a flexible criminology degree, so you can tailor your studies to suit your plans.
