Content

This SWAP Access to Humanities (Psychology) course is designed for adults returning to education without formal qualifications, offering a supportive, structured route to rebuild academic confidence, strengthen analytical and research skills, and understand the human mind and society.

You'll engage with themes of behaviour, thought, culture, and social change — developing the study, reflection and communication habits needed for degree-level study.

Successful completion of this course provides recognised entry routes to partner universities, including:

Glasgow Caledonian University (GCU); University of Glasgow; University of Stirling; University of Strathclyde; University of the West of Scotland (UWS).

What you will learn:

A range of social science subjects, including Psychology, Sociology and Politics, History and Philosophy, Communications and Literature (Higher level), Mathematics (National 5 Applications) and Preparation for Higher Education.

Assessment types include essays, reports, class-based tests, group discussions and presentations at the end of each unit, rather than big exams at the end of the year.
