

Dance Science and Education

University of Edinburgh

Venues

Central Campus

Content

If you're interested in the development of dance education a comprehensive understanding of the science underpinning the art form is a must. This innovative programme – the only one of its kind in Scotland – offers just that, giving you the scientific theory and specialist skills that will inspire you to push the frontiers of dance and dance education.

Through a multidisciplinary blend of theory and practice, you'll learn to prepare dancers to improve performance, explore the physiological and developmental issues that relate to dance education and training, and develop awareness of changing trends.

You can exit at the end of 9 months with PgDip Dance Science and Education.
