Content

Through this course, traditional ecological and visitor management topics are complemented with the additional necessary knowledge and skills you will need, such as data handling, community involvement and woodland management.

You will develop your knowledge in all aspects of the countryside, conservation, wildlife, recreation, access and visitor management. Visits and residential trips are an integral part of the course - you will build skills and knowledge through visits to reserves, country parks and wildlife sites, learning to appreciate the many facets of nature conservation.
