University of Strathclyde

Content

The Professional Graduate Diploma in Education (PGDE) is a 36-week course for graduates who want to train as primary teachers. It leads to the Teaching Qualification (Primary Education) which allows you to teach in any UK or EU primary school. It's also recognised and respected in many other parts of the world.

You'll learn the theories behind teaching practices and explore these throughout the year. You'll gain the skills necessary to become the best teacher you can be.

You'll also see the relevance of everything you're learning come alive while on placement. Classes are here on campus and you'll carry out three placements in two different schools throughout the year.

You must keep a portfolio of progress throughout the course. This prepares you for the continuation of professional development during your professional teaching career.
