

Glasgow School of Art

Glasgow School of Art was founded in 1845 as a Government School of Design. It is internationally recognised as one of Britain's foremost higher education institutions for creative education and research in fine art, design and architecture.

It has been in the famous Charles Rennie Mackintosh Building since 1899. Mackintosh is one of the many graduates of Glasgow School of Art who influence world design. The school is a small, specialist, international community of artists, designers and architects. It is a stimulating, creative place, where new ideas are encouraged. Teaching is studio based and face to face. The University of Glasgow validates its degrees.

Courses and Specialisms

Courses are taught through five schools:

- Innovation School - design innovation
- The Mackintosh School of Architecture
- School of Design – fashion and textiles, communication design, interaction design, interior design, silversmithing and jewellery, product design and product design engineering
- School of Fine Art – sculpture and environmental art, painting and printmaking and fine art photography
- School of Simulation and Visualisation – 3D digital visualisation and interaction techniques.

Students

The college has over 2,000 students, with around 35% from outside of the UK and representing 69 countries.

You could spend part of your undergraduate course abroad through GSA's exchange programme with 75 participating partner institutions.

According to HESA, 93.3% of students from the 2017/18 academic year went into employment or further study within six months of graduating.

Facilities and Services

Learning Resources at the Glasgow School of Art comprises of a library, the Archives and Collections Centre and a virtual learning environment.

The library has one of the finest art, design and architecture collections in the UK. This provides students with access to high quality information, resources and services including ICT facilities.

The Students' Association is based in The Art School, in the Reid Building of the school. It is a unique centre for music and visual arts in Glasgow. There are over 15 clubs and societies at the school, covering a range of activities.

New undergraduate and postgraduate students are offered accommodation in one of two purpose built halls of residence.

Rankings

The school is ranked 8th for art and design in the QS World University Rankings 2019.

The school is now also in the top 5 Higher Education Institutions in Europe for Art and Design.

The school has also produced six Turner Prize winners.
