

Scottish SPCA Inspector

Scottish SPCA inspectors are concerned with the welfare of animals. They carry out inspections, investigate complaints about the possible ill-treatment of animals and deal with calls about trapped or suffering wild animals.

The Work

You could be:

- inspecting farms, stables, slaughterhouses, pet shops, zoos or kennels to make sure animals are well looked after
- attending cattle markets or race meetings to see that animals are treated well
- investigating and reporting calls from the public about animals at risk and deciding whether to take action
- getting help from vets, police, fire brigade or coastguards to treat or rescue animals
- taking badly treated animals to places where they can be cared for or put down humanely
- advising an owner suspected of cruelty and warning of possible legal action
- looking out for illegal 'sports' such as badger baiting or dog fighting
- reporting cruelty to the police and giving evidence in court
- carrying out educational duties, such as giving talks in schools.

Pay

The figures below are only a guide. Actual pay rates may vary, depending on:

- where you work
- the demand for the job.

Salaries for Scottish SPCA probationary inspectors are £21,553 a year. Qualified inspectors' salaries start at £25,461 a year.

Conditions

- You would work 37.5 hours a week, but might work shifts or be expected to work some evenings and weekends. You could also be on call for emergencies.
- You would have to travel on a regular basis to respond to call-outs and to make inspections. This might be over quite a wide area.
- Much of the work might be outdoors, and the working conditions can be cold, wet, dirty, smelly or dangerous.
- It can be upsetting working with sick, injured and badly treated animals.
- There can be a risk of attack from sick, injured, nervous or aggressive animals.
- You may have to face threatening behaviour from the owners of abused animals.
- You would wear a uniform and further protective clothing where required.
- You must be willing to work anywhere in Scotland as a probationary inspector.

Getting In

- Entry is competitive.
- You need at least 5 subjects at National 5 including English and Maths and also, ideally, a qualification in animal care, animal husbandry or science.
- You must have previous practical experience with large and small animals, preferably from a farm or veterinary background.
- You need a full, clean driving licence.
- You must be fit as you may have to control large, frightened animals.
- Successful applicants will need to pass a medical examination and are advised to have an anti-tetanus vaccination.
- You will require a satisfactory criminal record check from Disclosure Scotland to show that you are suitable for this type of work. Contact Disclosure Scotland for details on the type you would need.

What Does It Take

You need to be:

- dedicated to animal welfare
- confident when working with animals, both large and small
- able to deal with distressing situations and very unpleasant sights
- decisive and able to take control in an emergency
- assertive but tactful when speaking to owners
- able to deal with a wide range of people
- able to deal with challenging situations
- able to work alone with no supervision.

You need to have:

- a real understanding of suffering animals and a desire to help them
- a caring nature
- sound judgement and the ability to show initiative
- good communication skills.

Training

- You would follow an initial 6-month training period. During this time you would be based at the Glasgow Animal Rescue and Rehoming Centre and do at least one placement in another area of Scotland.
- At the end of this time, you would take a written examination. You could then be posted anywhere in Scotland for your probationary period.
- After two years' service you would take the intermediate examination, and the Scottish Vocational Qualification (SVQ) in Animal Care at SCQF Level 6 after three years' service. You need to complete the SVQ within one year.
- Training includes criminal law, animal welfare legislation, animal handling and animal rescue.

Getting On

- With experience you may be able to gain promotion to senior inspector, chief inspector, deputy chief superintendent and chief superintendent.
- You may have to move to different parts of the country to gain promotion.

More Information

The Scottish SPCA is the largest animal charity in Scotland. The equivalent organisation to the Scottish SPCA in England and Wales is the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (RSPCA). The RSPCA does not operate in Scotland.

One way to get useful practical experience is to volunteer to look after animals at your local Scottish SPCA animal rescue and rehoming centre. You have to be at least 18 to volunteer and must have some experience with animals. Some centres may have long waiting lists, this type of volunteering is very popular.

Contacts

Lantra Scotland

Tel: 01738 310164

Email: scotland@lantra.co.uk

Website: www.scotland.lantra.co.uk

Twitter: @LantraScotland

Facebook: www.facebook.com/lantrascotland

Scottish SPCA

Website: www.scottishspca.org

Twitter: @ScottishSPCA

Facebook: www.facebook.com/scottishspca

Statistics

Employment Status UK %

Past Unemployment - Scotland

No Claimant statistics available for Scotland.

LMI data powered by LMI for All

Predicted Employment Statistics : Not available this career.