

Procurement Manager

Procurement managers manage departments or teams which buy goods and services for their organisations, ensuring best value for money. These can range from office supplies or raw materials for manufacture, to training, marketing or IT services. They are also called purchasing managers.

The Work

You could be:

- researching new potential suppliers and product ranges
- comparing bids from suppliers (or 'tenders') in terms of value for money, reliability and service
- negotiating contracts and prices with suppliers, including discounts for bulk orders
- developing and implementing the company purchasing strategy and policies
- compiling a database of approved and preferred suppliers
- evaluating the performance of suppliers, and producing reports, recommendations and statistics
- monitoring and forecasting stock levels and demand, or price trends on products and services
- visiting existing and new suppliers and attending meetings and trade fairs
- managing a procurement team or department, making sure performance targets are met and arranging staff training.

Pay

The figures below are only a guide. Actual pay rates may vary, depending on:

- where you work
- the size of company or organisation you work for
- the demand for the job.

Starting pay for procurement managers could be between £30,000 and £38,000 a year. With experience this can rise to £50,000 a year or more. Senior managers or specialists may earn up to over £100,000 a year. Some salary schemes include bonuses or commission.

Conditions

- You are mostly based in an office, but go to meetings with suppliers.
- You work normal office hours Monday to Friday, but sometimes overtime would be necessary, to meet deadlines.
- You might sometimes stay away overnight.
- You may travel around the UK or abroad, to attend trade fairs and visit suppliers.

Getting In

- You could study for a relevant HND (SCQF Level 8) or degree (SCQF Levels 9-10) in procurement, supply or business.

- A number of universities offer relevant degree courses which lead to Chartered Institute of Procurement and Supply (CIPS) accreditation. Check the CIPS website for details.
- Glasgow Caledonian University offer 3rd year entry to the BA/BA (Hons) International Supply Chain Management, which is accredited by CIPS. Entry is with a relevant HND.
- Some entrants have non-related degrees, but may study a suitable postgraduate course.
- Postgraduate courses (SCQF Level 11) accredited by the CIPS are available at Glasgow Caledonian, Robert Gordon and Strathclyde Universities. Check the CIPS website for details.
- You could enter a graduate training scheme where you would work towards professional qualifications from the CIPS.
- Alternatively you could gain experience first as a Procurement Administrator and study for CIPS qualifications part time.
- To work in a specific industry, such as fashion or engineering, you may need a degree in a relevant subject first of all.

You can look for work in most types of company including local authorities, the Armed Forces, the NHS, colleges and universities. Other big employers are private organisations, such as wholesalers or transportation firms, fashion or retail stores, engineering or construction companies.

What Does It Take

You should be:

- an excellent written and verbal communicator
- confident when talking to people from all backgrounds
- good at negotiating
- good at judging the value of things
- able to work to deadlines.

You should have:

- good analytical skills
- good planning and organisational skills
- good number and IT skills
- business skills
- a good knowledge of products, suppliers and distribution.

Training

- Training is on the job, usually through a company training scheme.
- You would work towards professional qualifications and membership of the Chartered Institute of Procurement and Supply (MCIPS).
- Relevant CIPS qualifications range from the Certificate in Procurement and Supply Operations, through to the Professional Diploma in Procurement and Supply.
- You could study for the Scottish Vocational Qualifications (SVQs) in Supply Chain Management at SCQF Levels 7, 9 and 11.

Getting On

- You will be expected to keep your knowledge and training up to date through a programme of continuous professional development (CPD), by attending a set number of hours every year of training seminars and workshops.
- You could progress by managing a procurement team, or moving to a department that manages a larger supply of goods and services.
- Your chances of promotion or moving around geographically would increase by attaining Fellowship of the CIPS (FCIPS), the highest level.
- You may be able to become a self-employed buyer.
- You could move into related areas of work, such as stores and materials control, or sales and marketing, or into general management.

Contacts

Chartered Institute of Procurement and Supply

Tel: 01780 756777

Website: www.cips.org

Website (2): www.cipsibuy.com

X: @cipsnews

Facebook: www.facebook.com/OfficialCIPS?ref=tn_tnmn

Statistics

Employment Status UK %

Past Unemployment - Scotland

No Claimant statistics available for Scotland.

LMI data powered by LMI for All

Predicted Employment in Scotland

LMI data powered by Lightcast